

Description: in each row, the left image is the original from the 50-image labeled dataset. The second image is a visualization of the original mask. The third and fourth images are two masks I generated after running my brightness-based relabeling algorithm to better capture the micrite and cement that make up most images' background.

